MORTALITY IN BUSINESS

Confined Exclusively to Those Firms Which Ignored Newspaper Notice.

The hollday season of 1808 has become remarkable in the eyes of business men for the public verdict, more emphatic than ever before, that advertising pays. Silent as it has been, this verdict may be read with startling clearness in the ruin of an exceptionally large number of retail firms which enjoyed every factor of solidity and success except the sugacity that exhibits likelf in judicious advertising.

Of the dozen or score of business houses that have failed recently, the largest is that of Heather & Co., of Sixth axenue, and no better illustration could be cited of the misfortunes springing from this cause. With a large and attractive stock, and an excellent situation in the heart of the district that is throughd by shorners, this firm s thronged by shoppers, this firm, heless, failed to attract custom, be-shoppers have learned to consult the ising pages of their favorite news-
